The Unprotected Residue

Mrs. Caroline Urie, the 75-year-old Quaker taxpayer of Yellow Springs, O., who has held back 32.3 percent of her income tax installment as a protest against military expenditures, has the nub of a big idea.

If similar estimates were made available for all types of federal spending, other taxpayers might go on record with the Internal Revenue Bureau as protesting:

1. All expenditures for bureaucratic boondoggling of all types, such as needless paper work, reports on the love life of turtles and junkets to the end of nowhere to gather information about nothing;

2. All expenditures calculated to run up the overhead of taxpayers such as reports to be made out in septuplicate and filed away in dust bins for possible future reference, if any;

3. All expenditures for the aid and comfort of political parasites who contribute nothing to the operation of government except their presence on the payroll and their vested interest in staying there ad infinitum;

4. All expenditures for duplicated and overlapping functions of government representing the unwillingness of the personnel of top-heavy government to get together and give taxpayers an even break;

5. All other expenditures which represent nothing but the federal government's ability to spend all the money collected by it and a little bit more to boot least taxpayers get the idea they are entitled to a modicum of relief from wartime tax rates when the war is over.

This would leave an unprotected residue of tax income amounting to about half of what is now being spent. But in the meantime, so many taxpayers would have been dragged into court and sent to prison for income tax evasion that it would take another million-odd federal employees to look after them—and there would go all the savings.

Worked Out All Right

The Ohio Bureau of Unemployment Compensation says two-thirds of the state's 850,000 veterans of World War II never drew a cent of benefits under the servicemen's readjustment program. Only one out of every 12 who drew benefits used up the maximum allowed. The bureau suggests this as evidence that most veterans returned to civilian life with a minimum of troubles.

There was a tremendous lot of worrying being done about the readjustment of war veterans to civilian life a few years ago. Most of it was wasted. The men themselves proved more adjustable than the civilians who worried about them. Certainly they had problems. Most of them had had problems before they went into service. All of them would have had problems if they'd never been in service. But for the most part what they were up against when they got out of uniform was so much easier to bear than what they were up against while in uniform that they weren't aware of undue hardship. In many cases, their toughest problem was fighting off people who wanted to practice psychiatry without a license. As most veterans pointed out at one time or another, if everybody would let them alone they'd be all right. They knew what they were talking about.

Locking Barn Doors

If the North Atlantic security agreement's purpose is to lock the barn door before the horse can be stolen—which is a fair way of putting it—perhaps the next step is to study the architecture of barns.

Most barns have a number of doors. Besides the "barn door," which is the one that must be kept locked, there are doors leading into the barnyard, doors permitting access to the hay loft and so on. In other words, it's not enough to lock just one barn door. All barn doors must be locked.

When the United States has created an illusion of security for itself and others by an Atlantic pact, it will still have the problem of Russian aggression in Asia—the biggest door in the whole barn, so to speak. So unaccustomed are Americans to thinking about Asia, however, that they find it impossible to believe that Russian conquest of China is more dangerous to their security than it would be if the reds conquered all of Europe, including the British Isles.

Russia and its satellites have told the UN Economic Commission that they are willing to explore possibilities of greater East-West trade in Europe. Along with that news comes a report that food has all but disappeared from Albanian markets since Albania joined the Cominform break with Tito. Cut off from Yugoslav supplies, food prices there have risen from 200 to 500 per cent, and the people are subsisting mainly on beans.

Hard-headed Tito has an economic weapon that may make Marshal Stalin change some of his political plans. For the Kremlin cannot afford to perpetuate a politically-induced bean diet for the sake of iron discipline and complete obedience.

The president of the New York Curb Exchange deplores this country's present "worship of safety." The pursuit of security, he says, is piling up money in savings banks and hampering insurance companies' chances and choices of investment.

Perhaps this is a good illustration of the contrast between the boom and bust of the Twenties and the boom and bust which some economists say still threaten us today. As we recall it, the stock brokers didn't have to urge people to take their money out of savings and play the market back in '29.

The non-stop round-the-world flight of Lady Luck 41 was a great and impressive feat, but we don't miss the man who performed it. The crew and aboard in Gary, Wis., on a Saturday, boarded high above the earth, came down on a Wednesday, and stepped out at 10:30 a. m. the following morning, when they were met by the state and federal police.

AN entirely unforeseen and unpredictable event may suddenly change a stagnant and hopeless situation on current affairs. It is possible the very root of such happy circumstances may be the birth of a brilliant idea, an entirely new perspective of the static situation, a stroke of genius, or even a turn of a romantic nature.

Abrupt change with new adventure may change the vista but not without hazard to funds, position, reputation. It is advisable to take such vital chances, but with discretion and vigilance as to snares and pitfalls, protect integrity, health.

Those whose birthday it is, may find a sudden and spectacular turn to depressed and stagnant affairs, opening a welcome "out" for an almost hopeless and distressing situation. By revolutionary idea, an inventive stroke, an insight into fresh ways is forecast.

While this may be the technique for "moving mountains" of static and stubborn resistance, yet over-dynamic push has its hazards. With astute care, "eternal vigilance" keeping balance and logic, even in radical innovations, great advances can be looked for.

A child born on this day may be an inventive genius, but prone to prodigality, excesses and waste.

In filling out your income tax return it is not advisable to list members of your pyramid club as dependents.

But the coffee and doughnuts might be a capital loss.

Great care should be taken with form 1040. If you find it leaves you with money, look for the error before mailing.

And remember... neatness and style will not score as highly as accuracy, and the decision of federal judges is final. Very final.

All entries become the property of the government and no alibis will be returned.

And I think it's worth noting that Mr. Truman filled out his tax form while on vacation and still seemed to enjoy the vacation.

Use Electric Shock Idea As Anaesthesia For Surgery

By ED EASTERLY
COLUMBUS, March 15—(AP)—A new form of anaesthesia—electrical shock—was used yesterday for rare brain operations on six patients at the Columbus state hospital for mentally ill.

Dr. J. Fremont Bateman, superintendent, said it was the first time electro-cocoma had been used in Ohio.

Furthermore, it was the first time that a pre-frontal leucotomy—penetration of the skull through the eye socket—was employed for brain operations at the hospital.

The operations were performed on three men and three women by Dr. Walter Freeman, a Washington, D. C. brain surgeon, while 35 central Ohio brain surgeons and neuro-psychiatrists looked on.

Superintendent Bateman described the operations as successful.

Here is how the operations were performed:

The patients were placed in a cocoma through shocks of electricity applied with two tiny, metal electrodes, placed on each side of the head.

Approximately 700 milliamperes of electricity were administered in one to three shocks, within one minute.

Out 2 to 5 Minutes

The shocks rendered the patients unconscious for two to five minutes.

After they were in the cocoma, a probe about the size of a nutpick was inserted above the eye and used to cut a portion of the brain. The eye was not harmed in the operation. Hereafter surgeons have had to cut through the skull to perform such an operation.

Each operation required five to seven minutes, as compared with the 45 minutes to an hour needed for a lebotomy, in which the skull is opened.

Some of the patients were walking about and talking a few minutes after the operation was completed. Hereafter hours, and sometimes days, passed before patients, who underwent the old form of lebotomy, could do this.

Most of the six patients chosen for the operation were afflicted by what Dr. Bateman described as a chronic intractable obsessional state, a milder form of mental disorder.

This disorder exhibited itself in impulsive, irregular behavior, poor judgment, and inability to make contact with reality. Dr. Bateman said they might be described as persons who lived in a dream world and had difficulty associating themselves with reality.

Both the electro-cocoma and the leucotomy will be employed in the future at the Columbus state hospital, Dr. Bateman said.

The electrical shock anaesthesia has advantages over the common forms of anaesthesia, such as ether, in that patients do not experience sickening after-effects, Dr. Bateman said.

Of the leucotomy, he said the patients are able to get on their feet faster and do not always require the expert nursing attention demanded for those whose skulls are opened in the lebotomy. The leucotomy also requires much less effort for the surgeon and involves less danger and discomfort for the patient, Dr. Bateman said.

GE Price Decreases Are Announced Today

NEW YORK, March 15—(UP)—The General Electric Co. today announced price cuts up to $20 on some models of refrigerators, home freezers and electric stoves, and said additional reductions would be made on many new home appliances replacing older models.

Charles E. Wilson, GE president, estimated that the new price reductions plus others made since Jan. 1 would total more than $40,000,000 for the remainder of 1949 at the retail level, based on current volume.

Savings on some current models of stoves, freezers and refrigerators will amount to as much as $20 per item, GE said.

The company said its new table television set would be priced at $339, as compared with $325 for the lowest price set formerly available with a 16-inch tube and that its new automatic clothes washer would be $10 cheaper than the washer it replaces.

Assembly Study On Conveyor Due

COLUMBUS, March 15—(UP)—The proposed Lake Erie to Ohio river conveyor belt will get attention of the state's lawmakers this week as the Ohio General assembly goes into the 11th week.

Both houses were scheduled to convene tonight.

On Wednesday night, the senate judiciary committee will open hearings on a controversial bill that would classify proposed belt conveyors as public utilities.

The bill is being opposed by 12 railroads operating in Ohio and Mayor Thomas Burke of Cleveland. The railroads contend they will lose $112,000,000 a year in revenue—49 percent of which goes to wages and salaries—if the proposed Lorain-to-East Liverpool conveyor actually goes into operation and is given the status of a common carrier.

Mayor Burke has declared his opposition to the project on grounds it would take ore and coal shipping business away from Cleveland.

On the other side of the fence, The Cleveland Press said editorially that the legislature should grant common-carrier rights to the belt conveyor system. It argued that continuation of "this area's steel industry, with all the allied indusfirst importance to us all."

The conveyor system, The Press said, "should mean further competitive advantage to this section in steel sales. It should mean maintenance of our present top position."

"In the face of this, the arguments of the railroads that they would be hurt seem much less important," the editorial added. "We must consider the future of this entire region, not a single industry."

GOP COMPLAINTS RISE ON HEARINGS

Say Democrats Have Set Up Labor Committee To Out Taft Law

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

WASHINGTON, March 15—(AP)—Two Republicans complained Monday that house hearings on repealing the Taft-Hartley law are a waste of time because, they said, Democrats "stacked" the subcommittee holding them.

Reps. McConnell (R) of Pennsylvania and Nixon (R) of California each told a reporter that Democrats on the subcommittee made up their minds in advance that they are going to vote to get rid of the controversial labor act.

Rep. Lesinski (D) of Michigan, chairman of the full committee, smiles. He appointed the subcommittee, including McConnell and Nixon.

"The Republicans," he said, "are just sore because they know we've got the votes to lick them."

The hearings ran into their second week Monday. Most of this week has been allotted to union spokesmen, who are united and insistent that Taft-Hartley be wiped out.

Four of them set up a solid front for repeal in a Saturday night broadcast. On the program with them was Chairman Elbert Thomas (D) of Utah of the Senate Labor committee. Sen. Thomas' committee already has okayed an administration bill to repeal Taft-Hartley and restore the old Wagner labor law with some additions.

In the house subcommittee, the lineup is eight Democrats and five Republicans. Reps. McConnell and Nixon said it already is dead certain that that is the way the subcommittee vote will be, eight to five, on the administration labor program.

"So the hearings are a waste of time," Rep. McConnell said.

"The chairman," Rep. Nixon added, "has packed the subcommittee with members committed to the administration bill. My guess is there will be a minimum of changes, if any."

"If we held hearings for six months, the arguments wouldn't change a single vote or a single phrase."

Business leaders spent last week testifying before the subcommittee. They held out for keeping the T-H law. Some even said it should be broadened.

But there were no signs they changed the views of the congressmen.

Reps. McConnell and Nixon said it may be a different story when it comes to shoving the administration bill through the full labor committee.

But Rep. Lesinski and his subcommittee chairman, Rep. Kelley (D) of Pennsylvania say the bill will come out of the full committee by a 13 to 12 vote—just as did a bill to boost the national minimum wage.

Newspapers Blast Postal Rate Hike

WASHINGTON, March 15—(AP)—The American Newspaper Publishers Association said today proposed postal rate increases "would drive every newspaper from the mails." It added proposed new regulations could permit "a fanatical bureaucracy" to determine the content of newspapers.

The ANPA's views were outlined in statements prepared for presentation to the house postoffice committee. The statements were by Josh L. Horne, publisher of the Rocky Mount, N.C., Telegram and chairman of the ANPA postal committee, and Elisha Hanson, ANPA general counsel.

The committee is considering rate increases proposed by the postoffice department which would fall heavily on second class mail used by publishers. The ANPA represents approximately 800 newspaper publishers having more than 80 per cent of the nation's total daily and Sunday circulation.

State Auditor Duns Youngstown Policemen

COLUMBUS, March 15.—(INS)—Sixty-four Youngstown policemen who were paid witness fees ranging from $1 to $65 were dunned for a total of $691 today by State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson.
 The auditor returned a finding against the police in favor of the city's police and pension fund following an examination of city officers from June 1, 1946, to Sept. 30, 1947.
 The auditor pointed out that such witness fees must be deposited immediately with the treasurer of the relief fund and not retained by the police officers.

TARGETS SET BY AIR FORCE

In Case of War, U. S. Has Russian Points of Importance Charted

WASHINGTON, March 15.—(UP)—About 70 strategic targets in Russia have been earmarked by military planners as possible objectives for attack in the event of war. It was learned today.

The Air Force has given the joint chiefs of staff documented assurances that the B-36 Superbomber could strike every one of these, flying out of bases on this continent and returning without refueling. The targets have been marked off on top-secret maps at the National Defense establishment. Reliable military authorities said they include major Soviet industrial centers. All would be within a 4,000-mile radius of air bases in Alaska and Labrador.

Evidence marshaled by bombardment experts indicates that Russia, as of today, would be unable to defend herself by intercepting B-36's carrying atomic or other "special" bombs on missions of 4,000 miles radius.

This evidence, based on tests under combat conditions, shows that present jet planes become inadequate interceptors at 40,000 feet. The cold, thin air does not supply enough oxygen for their engines or support for their small wings during maneuvers.

The Air Force finds, as detailed to the joint chiefs and outlined in interviews, include the following:
 1.—The B-36 has performed efficiently above 40,000 feet on two missions of more than 12 hours each. No other bomber can do this the Air Force believes.

2.—The Superbomber, still a new military airplane, already has demonstrated that it can fly 9,600 miles.
 3.—It is the only airplane in the world which can carry atomic bombs without any modification. It also can carry two 42,000-pound bombs without modification, better shorter ranges.

4.—Radar warning stations around the perimeter of Russia would be an almost prohibitive proposition. Even if such a system existed, relaying information on oncoming raiders over Russia's vast, undeveloped reaches in time for interception would be a tough problem.

Tests at Elgin air force base, Florida, show that today's jet fighters lose efficiency so radically at 50,000 feet that they have only an 80 to 100-mile-an-hour speed advantage over the B-36. They are reduced to attacking it from the tail, if at all. There they must pit their immovable 50-caliber gun with a 600-yard effective range against the B-36's automatically aimed 20-mm guns of 800 yards range.
 If the jets attempt tight turns they are likely to "mush" or "spin," and thus they must make shallow turns of several miles radius while the bomber goes on to its target.

"Our real problem," says Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, air force chief of staff, "is—how would we defend ourselves against an attack by an aircraft comparable to the B-36?"
 By the time other countries get the answer to that one, "the air force will have in being a bomber of even greater performance and capability," Vandenberg says.

See Encouraging Business Factors

CLEVELAND, March 15.—(UP)—How far the present business "recession" will go depends largely on the future volume of capital expenditures and the effect on business of the government's programs and policies, the Cleveland Trust Co. said today.

The bank's monthly business bulletin added, however, that there are some favorable elements in the present situation.

It listed these as:
 1.—Lack of severe credit strain which characterized the latter stages of many earlier business booms.

2. Absence of the "feverish sort" of speculation which occurred in commodities after World War I and in the stock market during 1928 and 1929.

3. The fact that readjustments as among different industries have been taking place gradually rather than all at once, helping to cushion the effects of reduced operations on the economy as a whole.

Present evidences of recession, according to Cleveland Trust, are the rise in unemployment figures, the decline in retail sales and especially in building materials and hardware, the reduced number of new residential dwelling units starting in January, decline of the wholesale price index and the increased number of business failures.
 The bank said it is "probable" that further moderate declines in the retail price level will take place this year.

The Trust company pointed out that while there is a more-than-seasonal increase in unemployment, it is still relatively low as compared with earlier years and particularly when measured against the size of the total labor force.
